Study in Germany: Complete Step-by-Step Guide

Admission & Student Visa Guide – 9 steps from eligibility to the visa interview

Important notice: University admission rules, blocked account amounts, visa requirements and appointment procedures can change. Always verify the latest information on the official websites of the university, DAAD and the relevant German embassy or consulate before applying.

1. Why Choose Germany for Higher Education?

- Tuition-free education at public universities: most public universities do not charge tuition fees, even for international students. Students generally pay only a semester contribution, which covers administrative services and may include public transport benefits.
- Opportunities for permanent settlement: graduates can explore employment and transition to an appropriate residence permit, and may qualify for permanent residence after meeting employment, contribution, language and other legal requirements. Under the current nationality framework, eligible individuals may generally apply for German citizenship after five years of lawful residence, subject to conditions.
- Safe and peaceful environment: well-developed infrastructure, public services, reliable public transport and a strong rule of law.
- Part-time work: international students may work part-time within the limits of their residence permit to support accommodation, food and transport. Earnings and expenses vary by city and lifestyle.
- Better quality of life: quality education, employment opportunities, public transport, healthcare infrastructure and social security.

2. The 9 Steps at a Glance

1. Check your academic eligibility.
2. Find and shortlist German universities.
3. Fulfil the English language requirements.
4. Prepare your application documents.
5. Apply to German universities.
6. Accept an admission offer and select your university.
7. Book your German embassy appointment.
8. Fulfil the student visa requirements.
9. Prepare for your visa interview.

Step 1: Check Your Eligibility

Eligibility depends on your previous qualifications and the degree you want. General overview for students with Pakistani educational backgrounds:

Degree level	Qualification	General position
Bachelor's	FSc or DAE	Generally cannot enter a German bachelor's program directly. May need two semesters at a recognised Pakistani university or the Studienkolleg (preparatory course) route, depending on qualifications and admission requirements.
Bachelor's	BSc or Associate Degree Program (ADP)	May be eligible for certain bachelor's programs, depending on academic background and university requirements.
Master's	16 years of education	May generally apply, provided the previous degree is relevant to the intended subject.
Master's	18 years of education	May also qualify, depending on qualifications and admission criteria.

As a general guideline, students with about 13 years of education may explore bachelor's pathways, and those with 16 years may explore master's programs. However, eligibility is not decided by years alone; every university and program has its own requirements.

Step 2: Find and Shortlist German Universities

- Method 1 – DAAD database: the German Academic Exchange Service (DAAD) has an online database of degree programs for international students. Its search may sometimes show results not directly relevant to your field.
- Method 2 – Targeted course search: search for specific English-taught programs using focused course categories and subject keywords.

After identifying programs, open the program information on DAAD and check: academic admission requirements, language requirements, application procedures, required documents and application deadlines. Shortlist approximately five to seven universities and review each one's language requirements.

Step 3: English Language Requirements

Requirements differ by university and program (for example IELTS 6.0, 6.5 or 7.0).

Proof of English	What to know
IELTS	Accepted by a large proportion of German universities. Required scores commonly range from 6.0 to 7.0.
TOEFL	Accepted by a large proportion of German universities.
English Proficiency Certificate	Accepted by some institutions as alternative proof.
Medium of Instruction (MOI) Certificate	Accepted by some institutions as alternative proof.

Taking IELTS is generally a good strategy because it lets you apply to a broader range of programs. If you do not want to take IELTS, search specifically for universities that accept alternative certificates. Verify accepted tests, minimum scores and validity requirements directly with each university.

Step 4: Required Documents

Document	Details
1. Educational documents	Academic certificates, transcripts and other relevant educational records.
2. English language certificate	IELTS, TOEFL or other accepted proof, depending on the university.
3. Valid passport	Make sure it is valid and keep a clear scanned copy available.
4. Curriculum Vitae (CV)	Education, work experience, internships, skills and other relevant information.
5. Recommendation letters	Some universities require letters from professors, supervisors or employers.
6. Motivation letter	An important part of many applications (see below).
7. Additional certificates	Internship, experience and training certificates, academic achievements and professional certifications relevant to your program.
8. APS or other verification	Some applicants need additional academic verification depending on country of education and university or visa requirements. Pakistani applicants should check whether specific requirements apply.

What your motivation letter should explain

- Why you are interested in the particular degree program.
- Why you have chosen that university.
- How your previous education relates to your intended course.
- What your academic and professional goals are.
- How the program will contribute to your future plans.

Do educational documents need attestation?

Generally you do not need to attest every document before the initial online university application; many universities accept scanned copies of originals, but requirements differ. For the German student visa, documents may need to be properly attested or verified as required by the relevant German mission, so check the requirements before your embassy appointment and complete the process in advance.

Step 5: Apply to German Universities

There are three general application methods:

- Method 1 – Directly through the university portal: create an account, complete the form, upload documents and submit.
- Method 2 – Through Uni-Assist: submit your documents to Uni-Assist, which checks whether you meet the criteria and forwards eligible applications to the university.
- Method 3 – Through the university after obtaining a VPD (Vorprüfungsdokumentation): (1) apply for a VPD through Uni-Assist, (2) Uni-Assist evaluates your qualifications, (3) you receive the VPD, (4) you submit the VPD with the remaining documents through the university's own portal.

How to know which method to use

Open the program page on DAAD and find the section "Submit Application To". It explains whether to apply directly, through Uni-Assist, or obtain a VPD first. Always follow your selected university's instructions.

Are applications online?

Most universities accept online applications, but some also require physical copies. In that case: prepare the copies, have them certified or notarised as instructed, and send them by international courier (e.g. Pakistan Post, TCS or DHL). Always check whether physical documents are required before sending anything.

Step 6: Accept an Admission Offer and Select Your University

Apply to multiple universities rather than relying on one; multiple offers give flexibility. Some universities offer deferred admission, allowing eligible students to join a later semester. When choosing between offers, consider:

Factor	What to consider
1. University location	Small town or major city? Larger cities may offer more jobs, networking and industry access; smaller cities may be more affordable.
2. Job opportunities	Is the university in an industrial region? Are there companies in your field? Are part-time jobs available? What are post-graduation prospects?
3. Your interest in the program	Choose a program matching your background, interests and career plans; do not choose one just because it seems easier.
4. University ranking	Worth considering but not the only priority. Public universities generally maintain strong standards, and suitability for your subject and career goals may matter more than ranking.

After choosing, complete enrolment according to the university's instructions. Once enrolment is confirmed, you officially become an enrolled student.

Step 7: Book Your German Embassy Appointment

After receiving your admission letter, book your student visa appointment. If applying from outside Pakistan, check the website of the German Embassy or Consulate responsible for your area for the current procedure and waiting times.

For Pakistani applicants

- German Consulate General, Karachi: applicants under its jurisdiction can use its official appointment booking system. Slots may open at specific times, so monitor the website regularly.
- German Embassy, Islamabad: applicants from Punjab and Khyber Pakhtunkhwa generally fall under Islamabad. Availability can be limited; you may need to register or book well in advance. Waiting times vary by semester and current procedures, so monitor official announcements.

Important: for Islamabad you may need to plan appointment registration much earlier than your admission and visa preparation, but you must have the required admission documentation when attending the appointment.

Step 8: Fulfil the Student Visa Requirements

- German university admission letter: from a recognised German university, or an appropriate admission document that meets the visa requirements.
- Blocked account (Sperrkonto): one of the most important financial requirements for many applicants. It shows you have sufficient funds to support yourself in Germany. Deposit the required amount into an approved blocked account provider. The amount can change under German immigration regulations, so verify the latest requirement before opening the account.

When to open the blocked account

Ideally when you reasonably expect to get an embassy appointment, e.g. about two to three weeks before the expected appointment. Make sure the funds have reached the account and you have the blocked account confirmation at least one to two weeks before the visa interview.

Other documents you may need

- Valid passport
- Completed national visa application form
- Biometric photographs
- Academic certificates and transcripts
- CV and motivation letter
- Proof of language proficiency
- Health insurance documentation, where required
- Proof of accommodation, if applicable
- Visa application fee
- Other documents specified by the relevant German Embassy or Consulate

Review the official student visa checklist for your country and appointment location.

Step 9: Prepare for Your Visa Interview

Depending on the mission and country, the process may involve an in-person interview or only document submission. For Pakistani applicants, student visa applications generally involve an interview at the relevant German mission.

Common question	How to approach it
Why have you chosen Germany for higher education?	Explain why Germany is the right destination for your academic and professional goals.
Why have you selected this particular course?	Discuss your interest in the program and how it connects with your previous education.
Why did you choose this university?	Explain why it suits your academic interests and future career plans.
What are your future career plans?	Discuss your professional goals and how the degree will help you achieve them.
How will you finance your studies and living expenses?	Be prepared to explain your financial arrangements and show you meet the financial requirements.
What do you plan to do after completing your degree?	Explain clearly and honestly, consistent with your actual intentions and the applicable immigration rules.

Tips for a successful interview

- Understand your chosen degree program.
- Research your university before the interview.
- Be familiar with your academic background.
- Prepare clear and honest answers.
- Understand your financial arrangements.
- Organise all required documents in advance.
- Avoid memorising answers without understanding them.

Show that you have a genuine academic purpose and understand the program you have chosen.

Bonus Step: After the Visa Interview

Processing times vary by embassy, application volume and individual circumstances. For planning, allow approximately four to six weeks or longer (not guaranteed). While waiting you can: arrange luggage and essentials, research accommodation in your university city, explore flight options, learn basic German phrases, research public transport and prepare for the academic and cultural environment. Once the visa is approved, finalise travel arrangements.
